Chhota Bheem is the biggest kids' show in India - it's got a huge fan following among children, parents and grandparents alike! The reason people love the show so much is that each episode has an important lesson to teach which usually comes from one of Bheem's misadventures. So kids usually get hooked by the storyline while adults enjoy laughing at his adventures. Chhota Bheem comes from a series of animated Hindi movies based on the Little Boy tales. They were produced by Sahara One, a leading animation studio in India. The first movie was made in 1953 and was about a boy who took on a magical kingdom's evil King Cobra. The second movie came out in 1955 and featured Chhota Bheem himself as the hero. "Chhota Bheem and The Throne Of Bali" is the third movie in the series - it was released in 1986. It was directed by Seema Biswas and she also wrote this movie's script. Most of the cartoon episodes of Chhota Bheem in Hindi show Bheem sitting on his throne in front of his courtyard. Sometimes he is shown sitting on the steps to the courtyard, or standing next to it. Chhota Bheem wears a tall blue top hat and tall yellow boots. He has long brown hair and wears a red coat with white buttons down its front. Bheem carries around a black cane with an orange knob at the end of it that is used for beating people who offend him (or anyone else really) with it. Bheem lives in a tall castle with two towers on its top. On the outside of the castle is a tall fence with iron spikes sticking out of it. All cartoon episodes of Chhota Bheem in Hindi are about Bheem and his enemy, the King Cobra. The King Cobra's magic powers make him invincible against Bheem - he can even change his size and turn invisible. The only way to beat him is by shocking him with Bheem's magical lightening rod (which looks like a black cane with an orange knob at the end). The King Cobra has a number of henchmen who serve him and help him carry out his evil deeds.
